A comprehensive international university

The University of Lille is recognized as a French initiative of excellence university. Thanks to our numerous international partnerships, we welcome around 80,000 students across our 16 faculties, institutes and schools.

Our academic programmes are backed by cutting-edge research in synergy with the developments of the socio-economic and socio-professional worlds so that we can make our contribution to the great transitions of today's world.

Our campuses are the beating heart of the university where students from all nationalities can meet for classes, cultural events and social activities. Our Maison internationale is the gathering place for international students to meet for events designed to help them get to know the city of Lille and its region and to become familiar with campus life and their new daily routine.

By choosing the University of Lille, students are choosing a flagship university that offers high-quality training and the chance to thrive in a welcoming and caring environment full of exciting new experiences.

The university timeline

1569

King Phillip of Spain, with the support of Pope Pius IV, founds the Douai Faculty of Law, consisting of two law faculties (canon law and civil law). In 1895, the Faculty of Law is transferred from Douai to Lille.

1896

Four faculties are merged: letters, sciences, law and medicine, making Lille the largest university centre in Northern France. Louis Pasteur is the 1st dean of the Faculty of Science.

2018

The universities Lille 1 Sciences and Technologies, Lille 2 Law and Health and Lille 3 Human and Social Sciences merge to create the University of Lille.

2022

The University of Lille is awarded the Excellence Initiative label for its internationally recognized research and academic programmes. It welcomes four Grandes écoles: Lille School of Journalism, SciencesPo Lille, ENSAPL and ENSAIT.

Our values

The University of Lille is motivated by the desire to serve as a testing ground for the transitions that must take place due to the ecological, economic and social challenges of our time. To do so, we have identified three values which guide our policies and actions, and thereby contribute to achieving the Sustainable Development Goals defined by the United Nations.

1 Guarantee equality and diversity

The University of Lille is open to all and is committed to accommodating everyone. We respect diversity in all its forms and are attentive to combating discrimination, even when implicit.

2 Make solidarity a priority

The university takes action to support the most vulnerable students and to contribute to the personal and academic projects of all.

3 Preserve the environment

As a major player in the metropolitan area and the Euroregion in the domains of energy and the environment, the University of Lille is committed to reducing its greenhouse gas emissions and overall environmental impact.

A world-class university

The University of Lille has many international partners with whom we collaborate both in research and in academic programmes. Robust exchange programmes enable students and staff to develop their academic knowledge and intercultural and linguistic skills. Many activities with an international flavour are also organized on our campuses and we attach great importance to giving a warm welcome to our international students and researchers.

The Maison internationale

The Maison internationale is a place of welcome for international students at the University. The staff welcomes them and guides them through the administrative procedures related to their stay in France, starting even before their arrival in Lille. To prepare before leaving home, students can download two mobile applications (ULillGo and ULillExplore) that provide a wealth of information. The Maison Internationale also houses a Campus France office and a Euraxess centre, a European programme to welcome international researchers.

Once in Lille, students are invited to participate in many free events to help get settled, to discover the rich culture of Lille and the north of France. Thanks to these programmes, the university has obtained the Bienvenue en France label, which recognizes the quality of our programmes for welcoming international students and staff.

International networks

The University of Lille is involved in several international networks (including a European University Alliance) in which we collaborate with our partners on multi-disciplinary themes in research and training.

- NeurotechEU - European University of Brain and Technology: Its objective is to build a trans-European alliance of excellence in neuroscience research and related technologies in order to increase the competitiveness of teaching and research.
- 3i University Network: The 3i Network is a cross-border collaboration founded by Ghent University, KU Leuven, the University of Kent and the University of Lille. The aim of the network is to bring together universities, regional governments, the private sector and civil society to work on common challenges in their shared region.
